Project work	RUC adheres to project-based learning principles and each semester 15 ECTS is devoted to project work (both at BA and MA level). More information on group and project work can be found here: http://www.ruc.dk/en/education/bachelor-programmes/delte-bachelor/info-for-international-students/the-ruc-academic-experience/group-work/
Group formation process	It is very important that the student arrive at Roskilde University in time to participate in all study activities from semester start (1 September/1 February). Normally there will be group formation days within the first week, where students find the subject of the project and team up in project groups. Group formation days are usually a 2-3 days long process, where you spend the days talking about subjects for the project, facilitated by academic staff. By the end of the 2-3 days, students will have narrowed the subjects for the project into a very specific title that the project will be focused on and the team up in groups. At this time groups will register together for the exam as a project group. The process gives students possibilities to influence the subject and feel out fellow students, as they have to work closely together for the whole semester on the project. Is not possible to do a project alone.
Restrictions	Exchange students should mainly choose their courses within the agreed field of study. Whether or not they are allowed to take courses within other fields depends on their academic background and course availability.

Exam information

Exam information	Examinations normally take place in January and June following the end of course programmes and project work.
